PRESIDENTIAL.

[Correspondence of the N. Y. Times.] BELL AND BATES IN TENNESSEE, KENTUCKY AND MISSOURI-THEIR POSITIONS AND

CHARACTERS.
LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 16, 1859.
The Tennessee Opposition would unquestionably support Hon. John Bell, as the candidate of the National Opposition, and they have more than strength enough to carry their State for him. Hon. Edward Butes, on the same ground, might enlist the vote of Tennessee, as of his own State and Kentucky. Either of these statesmen, on a national platform, might bring out on his side the popular majority of more than half a dozen Slaveholding States.— The Southern Opposition, with the co-opration of their Northern brethren, can lect either on Union and National grounds. Their active and reserved forces, under liscipline, are ample for all the feints, and viles, and coup d'etats of sectional partysm. There are indications that all the oppositionists, in all these parts, will be ready to stand by any candidate of the John Bell or Edward Bates stamp.

The Opposition of Madison County, Ky., have set the ball in motion here. They held a meeting on the 7th, and passed readultions which plutions, which are commended by the Louisville Journal (in consonance with its more general tone for the past three months) to its "political friends in the State generally." These Madisonians iynore the Slavery hobbies. They resolve that they are opposed to misrule, to disunion, to Abolitionism, and to funaticism in all its forms; that they stand equally aloof from Northern Abolitionists and Southern ullifiers, fear neither and despise both; that the frauds, corruption, extravagance and general mismanagement of the Buchmier Administration merit universal condemnation; that they hopefully look for-ward to the day when the General Government will pay some regard to American labor, to the development of the immense agricultural, manufacturing and commer-cial interests of the American people, to the restoration of those national and "ancient principles taught by Washington and Madison, and consecrated in our own age by Webster and Clay;" and that "in this good object and work the Opposition of Kentucky can count upon the coopera-tion of their friends in Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, Maryland and Missouri, anded together under the leadership of atriots like Crittenden, Bell, Botts, Ray-or. Davis and Bates." Edward Bates' position is well known. He has always kept aloof from the party contentions of the times. Like Henry Wheeling, Va.

Contentions of the times. Like llenry Clay, he would never lift a finger to extend Slavery, by Federal means, over one foot of Territory. The Constitution, in his judgment, does recognize the institution outside of slaveholding States. In accordance with the compromises and guarantees of the Constitution, the slave representation. esentation, and the other rights of such States, within their respective limits, must be protected so long as they choose to legalize and retain Slavery; and fugitives nust be returned to their masters. But slaveholding is entitled to no Federal prolection in the Territories in the United Congress will never intervene to protect it there. He manifestly regards this question of Slavery as practically no longer before the people. Now and hence-forth it is an abstraction. The Territorial policy inaugurated in 1854, if carried out, usures the Territorial settlement of it is ill cases. It will be carried out. If the people of a Territory choose to present a Constitution tolerating Slavery, Mr. Bates would, no more than did Mr. Clay, oppose heir admission on that account. Federal Government, under the Constituion, should protect it where it is, and do nothing to extend it where it is not. It will and can do nothing to extend it. Other subjects, he declares, demand and should absorb the attention of our legislators at Washington.

John Bell, likewise, I learn authoritatively, is set against all this Slavery agitation. He always has been. He avers that the worst enemies to the South are some of the "Democratic" Slavery agitators in the South, and that their charges against the Roughligan Party are charges against the Republican Party are most calumnious.— He believes that the great body of Republicans are disposed to waive all sectional issues and unite with conservatives of every section to put down and do away with "Democratic" agitation and misrule. He would discountenance anything designed to prevent this union. "Congressional protection," to his view, is just as sectional as "Congressional prohibition." Both these dogmas should be resisted by the South. They are, in effect, mere abstrac-Copper, Tin & Sheet Iron Ware, tions. The agitation of them breeds mischief, and only mischief, continually. Mr. Bell has always resisted anything looking or tending to this. The Opposition of tions. The agitation of them breeds mis-chief, and only mischief, continually. Mr.
